Spotlight

A 3D Telematic Cinema Performance about Width, Height and Depth.

Work begins on the next Telematic Cinema project “XYZ,” a 3D digital poem exploring the social and personal elements of width, height and depth through poetry, music, movement and 3D stereographic media. This new work will investigate concepts such as humanity’s width of knowledge and experience, its heights of aspiration and its depth of spirit.

Another Language Performing Arts Company will investigate how the concepts of 3D correlate with human functionality. This performance art work will focus on the cinematic story. Elizabeth Miklavcic will perform live in the VisLab Black Box Theater, interacting with the visual events on the screen.

Characters will appear on the screen wrapped in 3D animated shapes revealing their technological thoughts. They will appear and disappear in their proverbial “thought bubbles,” reflecting upon many questions about functionality in this modern world.

Jimmy Miklavcic will manipulate and mix the digital elements while simultaneously sending the live performance over the Internet. “XYZ” will be available in several digital venues, as well as performed for a live audience in the VisLab Black Box Theater at the University of Utah Intermountain Network and Scientific Computation Center on February 22-24 and March 1-3, 2013.

Each telematic work of Another Language takes more than a year to develop. Emphasis is placed on research and the investigation of new technologies. There is an excitement in finding the “voice” of each new project. Every new work is about embarking on a creative journey and learning from the experience of the creative research.

AWARD WINNING ARTISTS, MEDIA SPECIALISTS AND DIRECTORS OF ANOTHER LANGUAGE PERFORMING ARTS COMPANY OFFER AN INTENSIVE AND EXCITING INVESTIGATIVE COURSE IN TELEMATIC PERFORMANCE.

Students from areas of film, fine arts, humanities, engineering and science are encouraged to participate in this interdisciplinary course. The strengths of each individual's skills will be called upon to collaborate with students from other disciplines. This course will function as a scientific research laboratory using artistic expression as the medium for the research. Students will learn telematic performance options, create and perform a telematic work, document the project and conduct lasting research for use in papers and presentations for national and international conferences and seminars. This class is looking for adventurous, open minded and broadly talented individuals. Students will be challenged! The first day of class is a working day.
